Trinity Presbyterian Church was the setting at 6 p.m. Saturday, April 2, for the marriage of Katelind Nicole Wingfield and Dr. Branson Bruce Bolden. Officiating was Brandon Barnard of Fellowship Bible Church.

Two large spheres of white carnations hung from hot pink ribbons at the church entrance. The center aisle of the sanctuary was lined with eight wrought-iron candelabra stands with pillar candles in glass cylinders surrounded by white hydrangeas and ravel roses. Music was by pianist Alan Mesko.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory gown of silk-tafteta embellished with silver embroidery and hand-beaded pearls and crystals. The full gathered skirt had a ruched cummerbund at the waist with a bow and streamers extending over a semi-cathedral train. Her ivory illusion veil was edged with satin cording. She carried a bouquet of ivory hydrangeas and ravel roses.

Bridesmaids were Caroline Damron, Macy Epp, Meagan Binns and Stephanie Byrum, all of Little Rock; Natalie Willett of Jonesboro; and Jessica James of Hooks, Texas.

Brooks Bolden of League City, served as his twin brother's best man. Groomsmen were Geoffrey Phillips, Joe Bresnahan and Chase Wingfield, brother of the bride, all of Little Rock; and Nick Butler and Matt Herring, both of Monroe, La.

A reception at Next Level Events followed the ceremony. The buffet held two large elevated arrangements of delphinium, ivory hydrangeas, pink roses and hot pink dianthus. Guest tables were centered with glassware holding submerged wedding flowers and floating candles.
